WHAT TIME IS IT?

It seems to this newspaper that the confusion as the time of day in Virginia, must be laid to lack action at the State level. Most of those we interview, seem to be willing o "go along" with either Daylight Savings or Eastern Standard Time, with the suggestion that the entire State "get together" on the time!"

When a city goes on DST, the surrounding counties are more or less forced to follow. But in areas of rural counties, with no immediate area cities, the tendency is to hold to EST. The end result is a lot of confusion, and we do indeed hope that by another year, a statewide policy will be worked out.

Appomattox is caught "in the middle" by an area to the west DST, and an area on the other directions with EST. What to do? It is a problem, but we feel that it is a problem which could have easily been solved had the State established a policy for all Virginia.

The problem has not been helped by the fact that, under existing law, local county boards and town governing bodies, have only "advisory" authority.

What time is it?

All we can say: "It is Thursday!"

Better Highways And Death

The national highway program—the superhighways we all look forward to using may reduce the number of highway accidents considerably, the latest figures seem to indicate.

In 1960, the figures recently provided Senators and Congressmen show almost 38,000 people were killed on the highways of the United States and over 3,000,000 injured.

The injury figure is almost as impressive as the fatality figure. The three-million plus mark for injures is a new high and it means that about one in every fifty person in the country, on an average, suffered some kind of injuring in an automobile accident in 1960. This is hard to believe but figures support the statement and if this pace continues for fifty years, chances are that injuries over the 50-year period would equal the 170,000,000 mark!

In other words, if you drive for fifty years, your chances of being injured on our highways are certainly too good.

The main causes of accidents, all studies show, are speed and careless driving, among other lesser causes. The toll attributed to speed lessened slightly in '60, over '59, but accidents due to carelessness increased.

On superhighways the penalty for carelessness is not as high as it on narrow more dangerous highways. That is why officials believe the new national highway system, will do much to cut down on the number of highway accidents. The program is a long one however, and won't be completed for many years. Until then, the death toll, and the injury toll, will probably rise, and if it does, deaths may be edging close to 1,000 per week in just a few years. They are already running over 700 per week now! That's a hundred a day we are killing on the highways!

INDUSTRIAL PARTICIPATION in the yearly civil defense Operation Alerts is typified by the Boeing Airplane Co. of Seattle, Wash., which periodically tests its plant disaster plan and will do so during Operation Alert 1961 from April 26-30. In some years all of the firm's 60,000 Seattle-area employes have participated. This is the Boeing Communications Center, heart of any effort to direct employes to evacuate the plant or take cover in the face of enemy attack or other disaster. Pre-recorded instructions are broadcast from here over a complex loudspeaker system which can reach any or all parts of the vast facility. Plant shut-down procedures, medical and rescue teams, and evacuation of planes also are parts of the Boeing disaster plan. (Boeing Airplane Co. Photo)

MR. GREEN, at the lumberyard, whose incoming shipments of building materials mean business for our railroad. He's just one of many local businessmen who look to the N&W for dependable transportation. In fact, of the scores of things you buy . . . from cars to china cabinets, from food to fertilizer . . . much of it travels by N&W.

MR. SMITH, traffic manager of the factory who sends his company's products to market on the N&W, knows that his shipments will be handled swiftly and efficiently. Dependable transportation is vital to the successful operation of his company . . . and a successful, growing company provides more job opportunities for local folks.

MR. BROWN, at the electric plant, who keeps power flowing to your home — your lights, your refrigerator, your TV . . . your schools and other buildings. We're proud that his company's plant generates power from coal hauled by the N&W. Coal creates traffic, and jobs in mining, transportation and power generation.

MR. JONES, the banker, who works to bring new industry to your town. We're backing his efforts with promotion, personal selling by our Industrial Department, an extensive, scientific industrial study of our territory. And for good reasons — new plants create more jobs and prosperity for your community, more traffic for our railroad.

These four know the score ...on efficient transportation

And so do thousands of other folks along our lines . . .

. . . who directly or indirectly use N&W service. We of the Norfolk and Western are dedicated to continued service to all of you, and to working as your partner and neighbor to bring progress and prosperity to your community.
